PATIENT NAVIGATOR

If you have cancer, know that you have help.

A diagnosis of cancer can bring with it overwhelming fear, anxiety and confusion. There are crucial decisions to make. You need information you can trust and you need access to people who understand your sense of urgency. You want someone to be responsive, informative, compassionate and capable of guiding you through the challenges that come with cancer treatment and recovery. And we have just such a person to help guide you every step of the way.

Introducing your Patient Navigator.

Patient Navigators are an important part of your treatment team, in fact you'll find your Navigator to be an invaluable source of support as you manage the challenges that your cancer journey brings. Your Navigator is your go-to person when you need answers to questions, access to resources or when you just need someone to help you understand and coordinate next steps.

During those times when you feel overwhelmed, it is your Patient Navigator who will be there to empower you and help you make the right decisions at the right time.

What a Navigator can do for you.

Navigators are there to do more than just hold your hand through diagnosis, treatment and survivorship. They're in place to empower you to make the decisions that are right for you. A Navigator offers...

Knowledge. A cancer diagnosis comes with a lot of information, at times very quickly. Your Navigator is there to help you absorb that information in terms that make it easy for you to accept and understand.

Coordination. There will be a lot of resources you will need help identifying and accessing. Your Navigator is there to help coordinate care between multiple providers.

Focus. Your navigator is there to help you stay focused on the right information at the right time, and to avoid overwhelming distractions and misinformation.

*“My Navigator became my friend.
She helped me with everything through the whole process. I couldn't have done this alone, and she was there every step of the way.”*
